FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

EMMI SOLUTIONS WINS WORLD WIDE WEB HEALTH AWARDS

CHICAGO -- August 8, 2007 -- Emmi Solutions, LLC announced today that it won five awards from the 2007 World Wide Web Health Awards. The World Wide Web Health Awards is a program that recognizes the best Web-based health-related content for consumers and professionals.

A panel of international health information and Internet experts judged the entries based on accuracy, success in reaching the targeted audience and overall quality. The EmmiHealth™ Asthma program won three awards: the Gold award in the Health Promotion/Disease & Injury Prevention Information category and two Special Awards, one for Most Innovative and the other for Best Site Structure and Navigation. EmmiHealth programs give people living with a chronic disease the information they need to stay on top of their health and manage their condition.

EmmiSafety™ for Parents won the Silver award in the Health Promotion/Disease & Injury Prevention Information category. EmmiSafety is a series of public service announcements that help people learn how to safely navigate the healthcare system.

The EmmiPrep™ Anesthesia program won the Silver award in the Patient Education Information category. EmmiPrep programs prepare patients and their families for an upcoming medical or diagnostic procedure by leading patients through a procedure-specific tour, from pre-op to post-op, including risks, benefits and alternatives.

The World Wide Web Health Awards is organized by the Health Information Resource Center (HIRC), a national clearinghouse for consumer health information, programs and materials. The World Wide Web Health Awards are an extension of the HIRC's National Health Information Awards, the largest program in the U.S.

"We are thrilled to be recognized by the World Wide Web Health Awards," said Michelle Sobel, chief creative officer of Emmi Solutions, LLC. "This awards program represents the quality, style and creativity we put into all of our Emmi programs. We have a talented team at Emmi Solutions, who is dedicated to bringing the highest quality of healthcare communication to patients."
